

Kids Matter! Research to Action in Children's Environmental Health

Friday, October 12, 2018
8:30-4:00
Sonja Haynes Stone Center

The symposium is designed to stimulate transdisciplinary communication and collaboration by bringing together scientists, clinicians, and public health professionals interested in emerging research and public health action on children's environmental health issues. Keynote and other speakers will address the ways that environmental exposures influence neurodevelopmental and respiratory diseases in children.

Keynote speakers will include:

Manish Arora, BDS, MPH, PhD, FICD, the Edith J. Baerwald Professor and Vice Chairman of the Department of Environmental Medicine and Public Health at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai.

Dan Costa, ScD, former National Program Director, US EPA Air, Climate and Energy Research Program

Registration is limited to the first 100 registrants.
Please register by October 1, 2018.
