6) Teaching Activities

Course Directorships

2010 - Director, Anesthesiology 403 Research Elective. Fourth year medical students selecting this rotation learn the basics of patient screening, informed consent, and the conduct of patient baseline and follow-up interviews for randomized controlled trials. These skills are learned by working with a team of full-time research assistants, study coordinators, and nurses in the UNC Department of Anesthesiology Research Division. Students also take part in our weekly research group meetings, and give a presentation at the end of their month on a translational research topic of interest. I see the students on a day to day basis during their month, and meet with them several times during the month to help the student select and prepare their presentation and discuss their topic of interest. (24 students since 2010.)

Monthly Teaching Activities

2013 - Anesthesiology Clinical Research Interest Group. Organize and lead monthly research meetings where Anesthesiology faculty and residents seek feedback on formulating project hypotheses and specific aims and/or on troubleshooting ongoing quality improvement or research projects.

Weekly Teaching Activities

2010 - Director, TRYUMPH Research Program Weekly Lecture Series. Faculty, fellows, residents, staff, medical students doing 403 elective or volunteering in the research program, undergraduate work study students, and undergraduate students volunteering in the research program participate in this weekly lecture series. Presentations include topical reviews, descriptions/discussions of emerging concepts or recently published articles, discussions and critiques of articles and analyses in development, and lectures by local or external invited scientists.
