

POETRY | FALL 2022

Under the Same Moon

By Hailey Glover

It was me and you Do you remember?

We fell in love that night

Just two strangers
Bright eyes and intoxicating laughter

Skin to skin and heart to heart

Baring our souls
Under the same moon

We shared our hopes and dreams
Our fears and failures Everything blurring into one Wondrous entanglement

The softest love I have ever known

How could it be that the greatest wish of my heart—
The calling to go into medicine—

Is both the keeper
 and b r e a k e r of my dreams

The reason I lost you And my only reason to keep going I sit here now without you Nothing is as it was Except I know we are and always will be

Under the same moon

Hailey Glover is a second-year medical student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine. She previously received her B.A. in Psychology and M.S. in Accounting from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is currently involved with research in atypical Parkinsonisms and is passionate about healthcare equity and diversity and inclusion in medicine. She hopes to continue writing poetry about her experiences in medical school and beyond. Learn more about her work and interests on Twitter @haileycglover.

© 2022 Iris: The art and literary journal, UNC School of Medicine