

UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center
Graduate Fellow Award in Basic Sciences

The UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center announces its annual competitive awards program for graduate students in basic sciences. These awards of $5,000 each recognize up to three outstanding graduate students in the research programs of members of the Comprehensive Cancer Center. Students in any of the basic research disciplines with a minimum of one published paper are encouraged to apply. Candidates should be enrolled at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, in their final or penultimate year and remain on campus at least 6 months to receive the supplement. Applications should include a curriculum vitae, a one-to-two-page, single-spaced research plan, and letters of support from the faculty sponsor, department chair, and one other reference (10 copies of each). Deadline for application is June 8, 2009. A September 2009 start date is anticipated.

Applications will be reviewed by the Lineberger Award Committee, plus invited reviewers. Selection will be based on academic record, quality of the research plan, and supporting letters. The faculty sponsor should have active, peer-reviewed grant support and be a member of the Center.

These awards are supported by the Board of Visitors of the UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center through the Annual Giving Program of the Center. Recognition of graduate students' basic science research is intended to encourage research excellence, promote recruitment of high quality students, and stimulate cancer-related research.
