The Daily Tar Heel

The Daily Tar Heel began publication in 1893, as The Tar Heel, with its editors explaining in the first issue that the "growing demands of the University have shown the need of a weekly paper." Over the next 36 years, the newspaper limited its coverage largely to the University and the surrounding "village" of Chapel Hill. In 1929 it changed its name to The Daily Tar Heel and began to expand its reporting and analysis of national and international affairs. Since then The Daily Tar Heel has often made news itself by drawing both widespread praise and criticism for its handling of various controversial subjects.

UNC-Chapel Hill School of Dentistry – Dental Faculty Practice

The UNC Dental Faculty Practice (DFP) is a component of the School of Dentistry, and its practitioners are School of Dentistry faculty members who contribute extensively to the School's mission of excellence through teaching, patient care, research and service. DFP practitioners provide both general and specialized dental care for patients for any age; each individual patient's oral health needs are determined after seeing a dental practitioner for a comprehensive diagnosis. At the Dental Faculty Practice, we never forget that the patient is the focus.

Student Stores

UNC Student Stores is Carolina's on-campus bookstore. Centrally located by the Pit, Student Stores is a convenient place to purchase books (text or otherwise), computers, clothing, gifts, snacks and much more. Inside the Bull's Head Bookshop you'll find the Daily Grind, where you can grab a cup of coffee and relax between classes. Looking for postage? Student Stores has a U.S. postal contract station (which is essentially a mini post office) on the street level.

Buy Carolina! When you purchase from Student Stores, you are supporting your fellow students. Not only is Student Stores one of the largest on-campus employers of students, a portion of all purchases directly funds undergraduate scholarships and graduate fellowships at Carolina. Since 1955, Student Stores has contributed over $24 million to non-athletic scholarships and fellowships, and has established a $500,000 endowment.
